Arnold Wesker gives a lengthy explanation of what he wants to see on stage, he goes to great detail to explain his restaurant and the people in it: 'The quality of food here is not so important as the speed with which it is served (Wesker 1960).. What else there is for him to do - he wants to fight '. This suggests that in performance there is a real possibility of creating the desired effect without having to justify whether it is naturalistic or indeed realistic.

Wesker continues to give character notes on each of his main 15 characters that are also accompanied by specific actions for many of them.. ' (Strindberg 1976) 'Naturalism alone corresponds to our social needs; it alone has deep roots in the spirit of our times; and it alone can provide a living, durable formula for our art.. Arnold Wesker, among the angriest of Britain's Angry Young Men, intended The Kitchen (1950) to depict a restaurant kitchen as a hellish synecdoche for capitalism, where cooks, pastry chefs, dishwashers, and waitresses struggle to maintain a decent level of existence.

Middle Maniacal is something that is a clear desire for Wesker in this play The popular representation of chefs and cooks even now is that they are all slightly insane and putting them in a kitchen excites this factor.. It gradually comes into full light as Magi, the night porter, lights five ovens in succession.. These terms have been used for many years now in conjunction with theatre Their meanings have changed and very easily overlap with each other, just as the above quotes suggest; because of this the task of performing in the form of realism as opposed to naturalism is impossible.
